Water Sensitive Urban Design

For: Works Engineers, Statutory and Strategic Planners and Environmental Officers.

Course Overview
The State Government’s recently released Water For Good and the draft 30 Year Plan for Greater Adelaide identify Water Sensitive Urban Design (WSUD) as a key instrument for pursuing more water efficient and sustainable urban development and public open spaces. They call for mandating Water Sensitive Urban Design by 2013.

The Department of Planning and Local Government has developed a WSUD Technical Manual for Greater Adelaide which can be found at http://www.planning.sa.gov.au/go/wsud. The manual reflects current best practice in WSUD techniques suitable for application for our local Adelaide conditions and has been developed in partnership with industry and government, with a significant contribution from Local Government practitioners.

Participants will gain an understanding of:
• water sensitive urban design (WSUD) concepts developed for Greater Adelaide
• how is it different from conventional approaches and why it is so important for our future
• “WSUD Toolkit” for Greater Adelaide and how to apply it
• practical examples and case studies of the application of WSUD in Local Government projects
• introduction to green roofs and living walls
• lessons to be learned from application of WSUD – and of not adopting WSUD best practice

Presenters:
Michael Barry, LGA Director Legislation and Environment; Christine Lloyd, Principal Project Officer, Department of Planning and Local Government and Prof Simon Beecham, Professor of Sustainable Water Resources Engineering, University of SA.
